

Qantas Fit-out

PROJECT REVIEW

Walton was commissioned by Qantas to fit-out their new headquarters within the newly refurbished Herald Sun Building. The 1,700m² fit-out comprised of new executive suites and chairman's office, boardrooms and meeting rooms, as well as administrative open plan office space.

The high quality of the fixtures and fittings was reflected in the timber wall panelling with stainless steel inlays specified as well as the state of the art internal security system and audio control system installed. Despite the complexity of the program and access issues due to the building still being under construction, the project was completed within a record programme time of only 35 working days.

The project was made difficult through very high security measures within the building, limiting access to floors and staff able to work on site. The project was completed within the original timeframe parameters and with minimal delays and cost overruns
